

Butterfly friendly garden

Spotting butterflies fluttering in your garden or resting in a warm, sunny spot can be a delight to see. Butterflies play a vital role in our environment, here are some top tips to make your garden butterfly friendly.

Leave fallen fruit under fruit trees, during the late summer butterflies will feed on over-ripe fallen fruit.

Make sure to avoid using pesticides and use peat-free compost.

Create a butterfly friendly pot, plant wildflower seeds to encourage butterflies and other pollinators to visit your garden.

Nectar is an important food source for butterflies, having a variety of flowers such as lavender, bird's foot trefoil and ivy, is a great food resource.
